Casa Calavera uses authentic flavors and techniques to create its own version of contemporary Mexican cuisine. “We pull authentic flavors from the northern and western coastal regions of Mexico to create our flavor profiles” said Casa Calavera’s Chef de Cuisine Hugo Cabrera. “We use blends of regional dried peppers, spices and pastes to prepare our adobo and achiote marinades that are the foundation of our flavor profiles.” The team of talented chefs have worked in several regions of the country including Baja, Durango, Zacatecas and Nuevo Leon, which has assisted Casa Calavera in achieving its menu strategy of blending authentic regional flavors and dishes in a way that are identifiable to its guests and still have the soul of the cuisine from its origination.
